errors are corrected in most copies. The Appendix is an account of the "Expenditures for the year 1779."

On June 19, 1779, the Board of War sent to General Washington three sets of printed Journals, volumes 1-3; the resolves from January to December, 1777, in sheets, and three sets "loose for Mar. and April, 1779, being all that are printed."

At the end of October the Commissioners of Accounts laid before Congress the following report:

CHAMBER OF ACCOUNTS,
Philadelphia, October 30, 1779.

The Commissioners report,

That they have examined the account of David C. Claypoole, and from the best information they have been able to procure from other Printers, as to the different prices charged for Printing done by him; they find that he has overcharged in almost every article, but still they are at a loss how to settle the account, and can only give it as their opinion, that the Public would get their Printing Business done better and at a much cheaper rate, should the Honorable Congress authorise the Committee appointed to superintend the Press, or any other Person or Persons, to receive written proposals from the different Printers every three Months, or any other limited time; and the preference given to the most reasonable. In the meantime they beg leave to recommend that there should be advanced to David C. Claypoole, Twelve thousand Dollars on account, untill said proposals shall be given in, from which the Commissioners expect they will be enabled to do justice to the Public and the Claimant.

They have likewise examined the account of Styner & Cist for printing a Circular Letter in German, and finding their charge extravagant beg leave to recommend that two hundred Dollars should be advanced to them on account until some method be fixed on to enable the Commissioners to settle such accounts with certainty.
